Is postgraduate study in your future? Information Session this week

Interested in adding to your qualifications? Don't feel finished with academic study? Or maybe you haven't been to university and feel now is the time to start?

The University of Tasmania is holding a Postgraduate Information Session on Wednesday 9 April at the Medical Science Precinct in Hobart.

As well as being an academically rewarding experience, postgraduate study can improve career opportunities and further specialise areas of study.

There is a broad range of courses available across all disciplines, and some postgraduate courses do not require an undergraduate qualification.

Specialist staff from UTAS will be available at the session to provide advice and the necessary course and admission information to help you make an informed decision.

Staff can also assist attendees to submit their application on the spot.
